ResultsOhio would reward successful programs

Come up with a good idea to improve opioid treatment or to reduce Lake Erie algae, raise some money to implement a program, and if it works, get reimbursed by the State of Ohio.

That's the ResultsOhio plan put forth by Ohio Treasurer Robert Sprague. He hopes for quick action to set up the initiative by the General Assembly, and then for a host of nonprofits and others to propose solutions for a variety of social, health, economic, and environmental problems affecting the state...

"The Youngstown/Warren Regional Chamber supports Treasurer Sprague's pay for success model. Whether it's workforce development, the opioid epidemic, or the myriad of other challenges facing the Mahoning Valley, identifying and supporting successful public-private partnerships that address these policy issues is of great importance. This model is fiscally responsible to taxpayers in that it embraces projects that are proven to be effective, rather than funding statewide programs that may have little impact locally or regionally."
